The class talked about the sense of sight today. They learned a lot about the eyes and how they help us see the world around us. They got to learn the parts of the eyeball most important to vision — the optic nerve, pupil, iris, and retina. Then, in small groups, they watched a short video about how the eye works. Each student also got to make his or her own optical illusion project to illustrate how our eyes can be “tricked” into seeing things.

In small groups, the students got to play math games on an iPad under the direction and supervision of a teacher. They played number tracing games, counting games, and simple addition and subtraction equations. In a large group, they tallied and counted how many of each eye color is represented in our class.
